Oxford American Headway 2 Workbook Answers: Part 1.Q: Prevent 'post:DeleteObject' from being executed for all cases In MVC I have such function: public void DeleteObject(string id) { WorksContext.Objects.DeleteObject(id); WorksContext.SaveChanges(); } The problem is that with such definition as property WorksContext.Identity = new System.Security.Claims.ClaimsIdentity(User.Identity.Name, "ObjectId");, delete is executed for all cases, even if at that moment there is no object with that id. I want that to be executed only if the id is not found in database. A: If you want to do that, you can do like below. public void DeleteObject(string id) { if (!Objects.Any(o => o.Id == id)) { //Do your stuff } } Anyway, what you did at the time of delete, is that you are trying to delete all objects and not passing any id to your method. That's the reason why your model state is not valid. So, if you want to avoid that, you need to pass some id to your method and then check for the presence of that id in your code. Hope it helps.
